The marriage of Miss Rose Leon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. Leon, of Mr. Henry K. Ullman, both of this city, will take place at 4 o'clock today be performed by the Rev. Dr. Louis Starn in the presence of a small family party and a few intimate friends. The bride will be given in marriage by her father and will wear a traveling suit of blue broadcloth, trimmed in seal, with hat to match, and a corsage bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley. Her sister, Mrs. Charles Krulwich of Atlantic City, will be matron of honor, and Mr. M. Ullman will be best man for

LOVELY BRIDAL GOWNS

PICTURESQUE AS WELL AS UP-TO-DATE FINERY CHOSEN.

English Effects Seem to Be Popular.

Other Pretty
Details.

The wedding of Maj. Arthur Clive Morrison-Bell, M. P. for Hontom, second son of Sir Charles Morrison-Bell, and Miss Eileen Scott, daughter of Hon. Lilah Wingfield, recently at St.
Margaret's, Westminster, London, was accompanied by as many picturesque details as were in vogue before the war. Lord Powerscourt gave away his sister, who wore a dress of silver brocade, the corsage draped with Carrick-macross lace, and the train of silver tulle, also veiled with lace. The tulle veil was worn over a wreath of orange blossom.

The bride was followed by seventeen attendants, of whom nine were children. They wore picturesque Hoppner costumes of mauve, the boys having high-waisted trousers, with white shirts, and the girls frocks of white chiffon, with mauve sashes, wreaths of pansies being in their hair.

The eight grown-up bridesmaids were Lady Bridget Coke, Miss Muriel Strutt, Miss Eileen Scott, Miss Rachel Lyle, Miss Enid Campbell, Miss Joselyn Wingfield, Miss Sylvia Brooke and Miss Hilda Macdonald. Their dresses in different shades of mauve chamoise, edged with brown fur, while they had gold bandeaux underneath the tulle veils. To each bridesmaid the bridegroom gave a mauve enamel ball watch on a long chain and a set of silver pendants, while the bride presented mauve enamel pendants to the little girls and waistcoat buttons to the boys. Capt. Eustace Morrison-Bell was his mother's best man.

Miss Alice Gertrude Gordon of this city was among the bridesmaids at the marriage last week in New York of Miss
Eleanor Bartlett and Mr. Carter Phelps. The dressing was very smart, the attendants wearing gray, with a yellow relief.

Their short and full frocks were of yellow satin and tulle. The low tulle bodies had cap sleeves to match edged with silver. Narrow silver ribbons crossed the back at the waist line and ran down into a wider sash of silver cloth wound about the slender hips and held in the center front with a silver buckle, from which fell the ends, terminating in silver tassels. Over this was a straight coat body of unlined tulle with long sleeves finished at the wrists with gray fur; this straight bodice terminated under the sash. It was finished at the throat with flat collar of gray fur.

From the silver girdles fell extremely full gray tulle over skirts finished in a full flare below the knees and bordered with a trim box ruche of the tulle through which ran silver ribbons tied at intervals in "overs" knots. Their gray tulle picture hats had silver trim-work, and at the side were paddle-shaped ornaments of silver lace. Instead of flowers they carried little be-rel muffs of gray tulle edged with gray fur.

The matron of honor wore palest gray satin trimmed in silver and having an overdress of gray tulle, and wore a silver lace hat trimmed with shadings of silver. The bridesmaid wore a dress of silver and tulle, and a sheaf of yellow chrysanthemums.
The bride wore a short skirted frock of white satin, the satin falling in irregular fluted points over a triple tripetticoat of white chiffon. The very long court train of white satin was suspended from the shoulders and over the full tulle veil fell one of rose point work by the bride's mother and sister at their wedding. The low cut corseage was draped with point lace. She carried an arm bouquet of white orchids.

The last touch in the matter of dress seems to have appeared at the weddings last week.

Cloth of Silver and Clouds of Tulle.

In New York of Miss Matilda
Bigelow and Mr.
H. C. Pell and of Miss Marie Tallier and Mr. S. Bryce Wing.
The first-named wore silver tissue and white tulle, the long train being of cloth of silver. The bridegroom's present was a diamond and sapphire emeralds, was worn. Her bridesmaid were in pink tulle beautifully embroided.

Miss Tallier wore a wonderful dress, in which cloth of silver was the leading fabric. It was covered with a white tulle, edged with bands of silver metal fabric. The train, which hung from the waist instead of from the shoulders, was bell shaped, flaring in flippers toward the end of its length of several yards. It was of net, bound with silver all around, and was caught at the waist in a girdle formed of bands of pearls. The bride's hat was small, tight cap of a transparent fabric, and the ancient point d'Alencon lace on the bodice and in the veil was of a rare old mesh which has been in the Tallier family many generations. One of the bride's ornaments was a large brooch, a gift of her father and mother.

The bride's attendants wore costumes of pale primrose yellow silk, the skirts draped in front. In the tightly fitting oblong bodices was combined mauve metal cloth, and they had sashes of mauve tulle. The mauve chiffon of their broad-brimmed hats, trimmed with a few little French flowers, was edged with silver, and they carried mauve orchids.

When Miss Hope Truxton Beale wedded Oliver E. Cromwell, a former Washingtonian, in Philadelphia

Bridesmaids in Shepherdess Dresses. Wednesday last there were no innovations from the customary arrangements, even in the matter of dress. The young bride wore white satin covered with tulle, trimmed with family lace and made with a long court train. Her long tulle veil was fastened with knots of orange blossoms, and her bouquet was a shower of lilies of the valley. The maid of honor wore pale blue tulle, made on a shepherdess model, with wide puffed overskirts over an exceedingly short drop skirt. The old-fashioned bodice was cut with a square low neck. Straps of silk were across the shoulders above sleeves of tulle, finished at the elbow with tulle ruffles. Silver tassels were used at the back of the bodice. Her hat was of pale blue tulle, its crown was crushed and the brim fashioned of square scallops. The bridesmaids were similarly dressed, but in gray.

A Richmond bride, Mrs. Waller W.
Dillard, formerly Miss Rose Pendleton Traut, wore a quaint gown, made with a basque effect and a long court train. The bodice was finished with the rare old lace that had belonged to Frances Nelson, daughter of Gov. Nelson of Virginia, an ancestor of the bride, and her veil of illusion fell from a coronet of real lace and pearls.

Her only ornament was the pearl brooch worn by her great, great grandmother, Lucy Nelson, at her own bridal in 1773. She carried an old-fashioned nosegay of lilies of the valley, edged with a lace frill and tied with tulle streamers.

The date of honor wore lavender chiffon and gold lace trimmed in orchid-colored velvet and carried a bou-quet of orchids and sweetheart roses.
The bridesmaids wore similar frocks of white tulle with basques of yellow satin and carried sheaf bouquets of yellow chrysanthemums. Their shepherdess hats of black velvet were trimmed with single yellow lilies and streamers of black tulle.

At the marriage in Philadelphia last week of Miss Mary Hewitt Stewart and Mr. Walter A. Scott, the bride's gown was of white georgette crepe with court train of white satin. The bodice of rose point lace was trimmed with duchess lace, and the long sleeves were of tulle. The skirt was formed of three tiers of plaited crepe, each tier edged with lace.
Over this white tulle was draped and caught in bouffant effect at the sides.
Clusters of orange blossoms held her veil, also of tulle, and she carried a shower of lilies of the valley, with a center of sweetheart roses. She wore Mr. Scott's gift, a platinum bar pin set with diamonds.

The maid of honor, the bride's sister, wore a French dress of silver lace and pink faille. She carried an arm bouquet of roses, centered with white bouvardia, and tied with blue ribbon and pink maime. Miss Margaret Luella Scott, the bridesmaid, was attired in a frock of pink satin with overdress of pink and orchid tulle. She carried Mrs.
Schoyer roses and pink snapdragons tied with pink ribbon. Helen and Dorothy McCune, small daughters of Mr. and Mrs. McCune of South Negley avenue, the flower girls, carried baskets of sweetheart roses, Mrs. Schoyer roses and yellow daisies, the handles of the baskets being tied with mauve in pink, blue and yellow.

A Halloween bride, Miss Helen Cudahy of Chicago, now Mrs. Austin H. Nib-bly, wore a black lace gown at her home wedding an effective but simple gown of silver brocade made in hoopskirt effect, and a long tulle veil that completely enveloped her figure was held close to the coiffure by a wreath of orange blossoms. She carried no bouquet, but instead a white prayer book.

The matron of honor also wore white —the gown being fashioned of satin and trimmed with silver brocade, and the maid of honor wore white taffeta and silver. They carried bouquets of white orchids.
